ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS

SYNOPSIS: LOGLINE AND ONE PARAGRAPH

LOGLINE:

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS is a hilarious thrill ride through the bowels of Hollywood's least-loved indie film studio – where quality was a happy accident!

ONE PARAGRAPH:

From acclaimed cult film documentarian Mark Hartley (Not Quite Hollywood, Machete Maidens Unleashed!), ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE, WILD UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS takes us on a hilarious thrill ride through the masterworks of Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus: two movie-obsessed immigrant cousins who gate-crashed Hollywood's party, ran an indie studio that became the by-word for schlock, and nearly took over the industry in the process! These cousins of chaos churned out a breathtaking cavalcade of hits and misses, made movies out of posters, sold others they hadn't even made (or written!), released a sequel before the original film, botched plots, bounced cheques and burned careers – and in doing so changed the way movies were made and marketed. This is a one-of-a-kind story about two-of-a-kind men who (for better or worse) changed film forever.

SYNOPSIS: ONE PAGE

ONE PAGE:

Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus were two movie-obsessed cousins from Israel who became Hollywood's ultimate gate-crashers. Following their own skewed version of the Great American Dream, they bought an already low – rent brand – Cannon Films – and ratcheted up its production to become so synonymous with schlock that the very sight of its iconic logo made audiences boo throughout the 1980s. And yet who could have foreseen how close they came to nearly taking over Hollywood and the UK film industry?

From 1979 to 1989 Golan and Globus 'flushed' out more than 120 films featuring ninjas, nudity, wooden action heroes, threadbare plots, unintentional humour and accidental moments of genius. When Menahem insisted on getting 'that Stone woman' for a shameless re-tread of Indiana Jones, instead of Romancing The Stone's hot property Kathleen Turner, he inadvertently launched the career of Sharon Stone. With hair-trigger randomness, these un-kosher cousins turned a renegade independent outfit into the seventh Hollywood major with an aggressive pre-sales policy – selling movies that hadn't been made (or written!) – an insanely prolific schedule of cheap mass production, a reputation for creative accounting, and a litany of hilarious misadventures.

The cousins' mud-against-the-wall approach to film-making found them constantly churning out product to keep their ever expanding company alive – always hoping the next production would be that elusive $100 million blockbuster. It couldn't last, and their partnership crashed as many of their movies had done.

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS is not just a hilarious tale of scattergun movie making, but of two cousins whose passion for cinema changed the way movies were made and marketed, and how ultimately this passion would come between them and the company they built together. This is a one-of-a-kind story about two-of-a-kind men who (for better or worse) changed film forever.

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

Having examined fringe cinema of the 1960's and '70s with my previous two feature documentaries, NOT QUITE HOLLYWOOD and MACHETE MAIDENS UNLEASHED! I thought that if I were to make one final film in this trilogy I would examine a subject that was firmly rooted in the 1980's and that would connect more strongly with mainstream audiences. As a child of the VHS era – the history of CANNON FILMS was ideal.

Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus were two movie-obsessed cousins from Israel. From 1979 to 1989 they produced more than 120 films through their American based production entity, CANNON FILMS. They ruthlessly and enthusiastically pursued their American Dream of turning a renegade independent outfit into the seventh Hollywood major with an aggressive pre-sales policy and an insanely prolific schedule for cheap mass production, alternating between exploitation and art fare. They became famous for producing masterworks of creative accounting – and their Hollywood misadventures were equally legendary.

After much research I realized that over the last 30+ years, Cannon's importance and relevance both to film history and pop culture had been seriously downplayed and their ultimate demise had allowed for them to be forgotten. Amongst their many achievements, Golan & Globus had reached groundbreaking agreements with the Hollywood unions that made it possible for the independents to grow. They were amongst the first to utilize the home-video market and they created stars and genres that still have an impact on Hollywood to this day.

I quickly realized that this documentary project ticked all the boxes for me – Golan & Globus' films ran the gauntlet from the outrageous (Bo Derek's Bolero, The Texas Chainsaw Massacre 2) to the spectacularly overblown (Superman IV, Masters of the Universe) – and the behind-the-scenes stories were equally jaw-dropping.

The cast of colourful characters involved included high profile stars (Sylvester Stallone, Sharon Stone, Sean Connery, Chuck Norris, Faye Dunaway to name only a few) and art-house icons (Zeffereilli, Godard, Altman, Cassavetes) – and this project would also allow me to document the careers of some more of my childhood film heroes (including the late Michael Winner).

But what excited me most about ELECTRIC BOOGALOO was that this project would allow me explore more of a human story – rather than assemble another "greatest hits" clip package. At its heart, this film is the story of two cousins whose passion for cinema changed the way movies were made and marketed, and how ultimately this passion would come between them and the company they built together.

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS

PRODUCER'S STATEMENT

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS first came into my world in 2011 after Writer / Director Mark Hartley approached me with the film.

Mark Hartley and I had previously collaborated on the feature documentary MACHETE MAIDENS UNLEASHED!, which was the sequel to Mark's first feature documentary NOT QUITE HOLLYWOOD. ELECTRIC BOOGALOO felt like the right film to conclude the trilogy.

Renowned Distributors Celluloid Dreams (Rest of World) and Umbrella Entertainment (ANZ) came on board to release the film. With invaluable support from Melbourne International Film Festival Premiere Fund – a real coup for the documentary as MIFF had premiered both NOT QUITE HOLLYWOOD and MACHETE MAIDENS UNLEASHED! – and Screen Queensland and Film Victoria, the film was starting to look in good shape.

However, before we could embark on this journey much needed extra support came from an unexpected source. Brett Ratner and James Packer's new documentary division RatPac Documentary Films had got wind of the project. They were eager to be a part of the film and be the Distributor for the North American market. With everything now falling into place we were ready to get the show on the road...literally.

Mark and the devoted ELECTRIC BOOGALOO crew travelled to 6 countries in 31 days, filming over 90 interviews with key names from the Cannon Era. We were extremely fortunate to secure interviews with Richard Chamberlain, Bo Derek, Elliott Gould, Just Jaeckin, Franco Nero, Dolph Lundgren, Molly Ringwald, Barbet Schroeder, Tobe Hooper and Franco Zeffirelli to name only a few.

We approached the cousins behind Cannon Films – Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus to appear in the documentary, however they unfortunately declined, leading to an interesting development. Halfway through the edit, we discovered that the Go-Go Boys themselves had produced their own documentary on the same topic, beating us to the release by 3 months. Cannon were famous for beating other films to the box office: King Solomons Mines vs Romancing the Stone, Breakin' vs Beat Street – we couldn't resist including this new development in our own documentary.

Overall, ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS is a well-crafted, fast paced and highly entertaining documentary.

Sit back, relax and enjoy the crazy ride...

DIRECTOR BIOGRAPHY

MARK HARTLEY – WRITER / DIRECTOR / CO-EDITOR

Director Mark Hartley is a multiple ARIA award winning and AFI award winning filmmaker.

Educated at Haileybury College in Melbourne, Hartley then went to the renowned Swinburne School of Film and Television in 1988. Whilst at Swinburne he wrote, directed and edited short films, winning the 1989 Script Award and the 1990 Editing Award.

After graduating from Swinburne, Hartley worked in a variety of low paying/high learning positions in the film industry: including production managing a no-budget feature, working as an assistant to Academy Award winning editor Jill Billcock on Strictly Ballroom and serving time as an editor at Mike Reed's Post Production – where he cut a wide variety of music videos, television commercials and feature film trailers. During this period he also found time to commence directing music videos.

In 1992 he joined Craig Griffin and Paul Goldman as a director/editor at City Films, who at that time were the leading producers of music videos in Australia. Hartley directed over 150 promos for local and international artists including Powderfinger, The Living End, Sophie Monk, The Cruel Sea, Madison Avenue, Christine Anu, Deni Hines, Tina Arena, John Farnham, Human Nature, Mental As Anything, Kasey Chambers, You Am I and Joe Cocker. He received 8 ARIA nominations, winning two statuettes (he tied with himself at the 2000 awards). He has also won a Tui for "Best Music Video" at the New Zealand Music Awards and has been nominated for an International MTV Award.

In addition, Hartley directed the official music video of the XXVII Olympic Games, the video for Walt Disney's theatrical release, "The Jungle Book 2" and was commissioned by Screentime and Channel 7 to direct the debut music videos for Bardot and Scandal'us, the two pop groups discovered on Popstars, then the highest rating series on Australian television.

Hartley was chosen by Film Victoria/Cinemia to direct the first instalment of "Script Alive", a season of live script readings, which proved to be one of the most successful events ever staged by Film Victoria.

In 2008, Hartley's highly acclaimed debut feature, Not Quite Hollywood – featuring Jamie Lee Curtis, Dennis Hopper, Barry Humphries and Quentin Tarantino – was selected as opening night film of the Melbourne International Film Festival before having an Australian theatrical release through Madman Entertainment and theatrical seasons in the United States and The United Kingdom courtesy of Magnolia Films and Optimum Releasing.

At the 2008 Australian Film Institute Awards Not Quite Hollywood won Best Documentary and Hartley was awarded the inaugural "AFI Documentary Trailblazer" award. He also received an AFI nomination for Best Editing. Not Quite Hollywood also won both the 2009 Filmink award and the Film Critics Circle Association (FCCA) award for Best Documentary – voted by a national body of professional film critics in Australia.

In 2010 Hartley wrote and directed Machete Maidens Unleashed! a feature documentary that examined legendary maverick producer Roger Corman's productions in the Philippines whilst it was under Martial Law. It was one of six Australian films selected to screen at the 2010 Toronto International Film Festival.

Hartley's first narrative feature film, a remake of the classic Ozploitation chiller, Patrick, starred Charles Dance, Rachel Griffiths and Sharni Vinson. It premiered in 2013 at Melbourne International Film Festival – and subsequently had its North American premiere at Fantastic Fest and its European premiere at Sitges Film Festival.

ELECTRIC BOOGALOO: THE WILD, UNTOLD STORY OF CANNON FILMS is Mark's fourth theatrical feature film and his third feature documentary.

Marina made an her inauspicious feature film debut as a topless peasant girl getting whipped by Faye Dunaway in Cannon's The Wicked Lady. She also appeared in the studio's Death Wish III.

ALEX WINTER — ACTOR

After establishing himself as a stage Actor, Alex Winter got his on-screen break in the third installment of Michael Winner's Death Wish Series, Death Wish 3, co-starring alongside the late Charles Bronson. He has established himself as an in-demand director with the cult film Freaked and many TV assignments.

DAVID WOMARK — PRODUCER AND ASSISTANT DIRECTOR

David Womark is a producer whose most recent production, Life of Pi won the Best Film Oscar in 2012.

David commenced his career at Cannon Films working as a first AD before being promoted to head of production. His Cannon credits include The Last American Virgin, Revenge of the Ninja, Ninja III: The Domination, Over the Brooklyn Bridge and Breakin' 2: Electric Boogaloo.

FRANK YABLANS — FILM EXECUTIVE

Frank Yablans became Executive Vice President of Sales for Paramount Pictures in the late 1960s. He then became the Paramount Studios' President in 1971, a position he held until 1975. During this time he oversaw productions including The Godfather and Chinatown. Yablans was then recruited to head film company, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where he signed an exclusive deal for MGM to distribute Cannon product – resulting in disastrous business at the box office.

FRANCO ZEFFIRELLI — DIRECTOR

An Italian national treasure, Franco Zeffirelli, KBE is a director, producer and designer of films, television and opera.

He is principally known for his big screen version of Romeo and Juliet, for which he was nominated for an Academy Award.

Zeffirelli considers his solitary Cannon outing, Otello, to be the crowning achievement of his celebrated career.
